And make sure to clean up after yourself - leave no trace - 'wouldn't want to make Washington DC messy' ;)

Everyone needs to be making proper posts about this so they can actually coordinate.

Maybe Arlington Cemetery? Good reminder of our ancestors who paid the ultimate price for the freedom we have enjoyed. Then a walk across Memorial Bridge to the Lincoln Monument.

If everyone is bringing guns then the police will be setting up roadblocks to stop people getting in. So aim to get there at 6am or the day before.

I'm going to stay out of felony range but I know how to use a baton and intend to bring a collapsible just in case.

I'd suggest on the way in maybe cache some ammo at certain locations. Just in case. I'm not sayir  : of ammo. But it's good to prepare for every eventuality.

13 A fair point, but there really isn't much point going otherwise.

▼ Did you miss the part where it says SHALL NOT BE INFRINGED? The Constitution supercedes all other laws. Any gun restriction is illegal.

▼ when the law no longer applies to those who dont follow the law, you are no longer obliged to follow it yourself.

Why should you willingly be a part of this two-tier justice system where politicians (democrats), BLM, Antifa, other agitators, and those sidling up to the NWO are not punished for breaking laws?

Camp out on the steps of Congress.

Drive into the city, bring your car into the rally, remove your license plates, and drive right on up and park on the lawn. Camp for a couple days.

u/AllyInAsia you had better be making plans to storm your own government on Jan 7. They will all try to coordinate their media message and foreign pedes are going to be needed.

I'm just testing AllyInAsia for fedposting.

▼

Notice he got pissed off when I asked him to specify what he meant, which a decent defense lawyer could argue was entrapment or enticement to commit a crime if he's a fed, specifically said to breal the law, and someone did it.

It's SOP for me these days.

▼ Unpopular reminder. There is still a pandemic and we need everyone healthy to fight this fight, so start loading up on vitamin D, zinc, and melatonin, quercetin, vitamin C. Look into what the right doses are. If you're in an uncucked state, talk to your doc about HCQ and Ivermectin. If you have underlying conditions wear a mask, possibly. The nice thing about them is it keeps the air warmer in the winter and helps with staying out in the cold longer, so they can be useful for anyone in these situations. Prepare for tear gas and other anti protest tactics.

The point here is that while 99.5% survive, we don't have the time or luxury of getting sick (with anything) and recovering. We need people at 100% raising hell, so prepare.

▼ Agree it has some, good for everyday use.

I think in this case I'd load up with 4000iu vitamin D daily, 1000+ vitamin C, 30mg Zinc, 3mg melatonin at night, unsure on the quercetin dose. I also like zicam melt aways. Talk to your doc.

Just looking to keep pedes strong.

3 Even if it's just some granola bars bring twice as much as you think you will eat because it could be a really long day and some of your fellow patriots might not be able to afford to prep as much after the expense of the trip. I intend to basically bring my bag I used in deployments filled with a few gallons of water and a bunch of dried goods to eat through the day.

2 And a body cam! We need someone to print posters. "Remember Valley Forge" would be good. The Continental Army suffered far greater hardships than we can imagine.

2 And Bring your guns.... Our representatives seem to only understand intimidation. At the very least a rifle can be inserted in such a way that a politician may appear to have an intact spine.

2 you may want to look up bringing out of state registered weapons into DC. Im not saying dont do it, but look up what you would be getting yourself into and if its worth it before you do it.
